It represents twenty growing years of Association experience in all kinds of Associations, small and large, and among all kinds of men and boys. It is designed to be brief, yet reasonably full of detail in method so, that by it: (1) Any secretary in any small Association may profitably organize his educational program. (2) Any committee may find how to study its field, discover needs, mature and finance plans to meet such needs. (3) Any person may know the varieties and tendencies of supplementary work in the movement. (4) Any teacher may receive practical suggestions in handling courses and subjects. (5) Any stranger desiring to know about the movement can be thoroughly informed as to its history and the reasons for its substantial growth. (6) Any educational conference, institute or summer school for study of Association educational work may use it as a guide. It is fully illustrated with over fifty charts or graphs which clearly interpret and emphasize many of the facts, principles and tendencies; also with thirty pages of half-tones showing the various kinds of work in operation. An unusually complete, cross-reference index of over 500 topics treated has been prepared and placed at the end of the volume. This will be found most helpful and valuable.
