

The Roman Aqaba Project: Final Report: Volume 1: The Regional Environment and the Regional Survey

By S. T. Parker, Andrew M. Smith

American Schools of Oriental Research. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, The Roman Aqaba Project: Final Report: Volume 1: The Regional Environment and the Regional Survey, S. T. Parker, Andrew M. Smith, Includes 114 illustrations, some in colour. Recent scholarship on the Roman Empire has focused on the nature of its economy, including sites that served as nodules of commercial exchange. Aila was such a port city on the Red Sea on the southeastern frontier of the Empire, now within modern Aqaba in Jordan. The city of Aila emerged in the late 1st century BC within the Nabataean kingdom, a client state of the Roman Empire. The port continued to flourish into the early Islamic period, handling trade between the Empire and south Arabia, east Africa, and India. The Roman Aqaba Project aimed to reconstruct Aila's economy diachronically. The project research design included a regional archaeological and environmental survey, excavation of the ancient city, and analysis of material remains relevant to Aila's economy. Six field seasons were conducted between 1994 and 2002, providing a detailed picture of the economic history of the city. Excavation revealed major elements of the city, such as domestic quarters, industrial facilities, fortifications, and a monumental...

READ ONLINE
[7.17 MB]

Reviews

A fresh electronic book with a brand new perspective. It is actually rally exciting through reading period of time. I am easily will get a enjoyment of looking at a composed pdf.

-- Eleanore Ernser

Comprehensive guide for ebook lovers. It is writter in simple words and phrases and never confusing. You are going to like how the writer create this pdf.

-- Dr. Cullen Schmitt MD