Excerpt: .pieces of wood before him, and if presently he is driven to refer to past-matter and speech, he picks up the stick referring to the subject, and lays it down in the same place again when he has exhausted his points. Then some speaker on opposite side objects--possibly with reference to Kinkala s pig, or Umbali s fowl, which Lumba stole, or is accused of stealing, and when stick referring to fowl is lifted, Lumba steps in with No--no--not that one, and, seizing another stick, deals with a totally different part of discussion. He relates how speaker s own cousin walked ofi Lumba s broiled rats and lumps of sugar-cane last market-day, and tries to get up counter-charge against him, till the sticks representing pig, and fowl, and rats and sugar-cane get hopelessly muddled up, and loud murmurs of indignation from friends number one...
