The Ant in the Ear of the Elephant

By Minnie Vaid

Rajpal & Sons, 2016. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. 1st Edition. An ant in the ear of an elephant can cause a lot of trouble, cant it? declares a woman protesting against the Koodankulam Nuclear Power Plant (KKNPP) in Tamil Nadu, describing the daily, peaceful, non-violent protest that she and other women from nearby villages have been carrying on in Idinthakarai since August 15, 2011. It is the proverbial fight between David and Goliath, with the villagers living in the vicinity of the KKNPP and most affected by it, pitted against the might and machinery of the Government of India. For these villages along the coastal belt of Tamil Nadus Tirunelveli, Kanyakumari and Tuticorin districts--that have a nuclear plant almost in their backyard--radiation is a real fear that dominates their lives and dictates their choices; to protest, to fast, to demonstrate against the government, to face arrest and incarceration. These Project Affected People or PAP do not believe the governments assurances that the plant is totally safe because they have not been consulted in any discussions about the KKNPP. Led by the Peoples Movement Against Nuclear Energy (PMANE) and its coordinator S P Udayakumar, the women who form the backbone of...
